Redirect Your Taxes to Fund a Scholarship. At No Extra Cost to You.

Lower your withholding. Raise your take-home pay. Give it monthly.

$1,700 a year ≈ $142 a month ≈ $4.66 a day

Federal credit limits (starting 2027): up to $1,700 per taxpayer · up to $3,400 for married filing jointly

THE PROBLEM

You want to help a family pay for their child's education or after-school tutoring. But to earn the new Federal Scholarship Tax Credit (FSTC), you have to donate cash, and by the end of the month there's often nothing left to give.

THE SOLUTION

Starting in 2027, turn part of your federal tax withholding into a monthly donation:

1

Lower Your Withholding

Fill out a new Form W-4, enter your expected credit in Step 3, and give it to your employer.

2

Watch Your Paycheck Grow

Less federal tax is withheld, so your take-home pay goes up.

3

Give Monthly

Use that extra money to set up a recurring monthly donation to Scholarkids. You'll get an instant receipt every time.

4

Claim Your Credit

When you file your federal return, your donations count as a dollar-for-dollar tax credit, up to the annual limit.

Important

Make sure your monthly donations continue. Your Scholarkids contribution is what offsets the lower withholding. If you stop donating, you may owe federal tax when you file.

MORE IN YOUR PAYCHECK. NO EXTRA TAX. A CHILD'S FUTURE, CHANGED.

FSTC

The Federal Scholarship Tax Credit (FSTC, IRC § 25F) begins January 1, 2027, and is described here based on proposed Treasury regulations, which may change. Federal tax credits depend on eligibility and individual tax liability. The credit is nonrefundable and applies only to cash contributions to an eligible Scholarship Granting Organization (SGO). Information herein is not tax or financial advice; consult your tax professional before changing your Form W-4.
